

Graduates from our programme can virtually find jobs in all places where computers are used. Graduates of the department are ready to enter into the fields such as systems analysis, application programming, network management, and information systems management.

Some popular working areas of our graduates are:

- All kinds of government offices,
- IT departments of private and public companies,
- Communications and networking departments,
- IT consultancy,
- Research and development, and
- Education.

Some of the most common employment opportunities for graduates can be listed as;

- IT managers,
- Development managers,
- Project managers,
- System analysts,
- IT consultants,
- IT project managers,
- Database designers and software developers,
- Database administrators,
- Network systems administrators and
- Information systems security administrators.